

After the show his confidence in Vy returned. She intrigued many males, to the point where Rabbit felt uncomfortable leaving her alone. Rabbit persuaded one of the barbacks to lock her away in the liquor closet.

As the evening wore on Rabbit acquainted himself with the employees of the club. He made his way to the fire exit. Guarding the door was the King Snake who had let him use the restroom. The Snake asked Rabbit if he would return the favor by watching the door for him while he used the restroom. Rabbit agreed.

The Antelope made his way to the fire exit just as the King Snake disappeared into the restroom. When the Antelope realized that the Rabbit was watching the door, he became excited. Antelope told Rabbit that he wanted him to work there as security on a regular basis. Rabbit agreed.

The Antelope asked Rabbit if he would like to have a drink with him, and then ran off to the bar. The King Snake returned and thanked the Rabbit. The Antelope returned with two drinks and began yelling at the King Snake for leaving the door.

On the following evening Rabbit arrived for his first night of security work at the Antelope's club. The Antelope showed much less enthusiasm for the Rabbit than he had the night before. The Antelope basically ignored him. He was too busy to be polite or answer any of his questions.

After a few moments a Squirrel marched into the room. He walked up to Rabbit and asked him if he was the Rabbit. Rabbit told him that he was. Rabbit had dealt with many Squirrels in the past and he didn't like them. He was surprised when this Squirrel introduced himself as the head of security. Rabbit asked him what his job would be. Squirrel asked him what position he would like. Rabbit said he would like to work at the fire exit. Squirrel told Rabbit that the Antelope would prefer to have him at the front door, but that he could work at any door that he wanted. Rabbit thanked him and walked to the fire exit.

